

How do travel agents save money?

Time is Money The biggest way travel agents save you money is by saving you time. You may be a pro at booking online, but we've all been there—spending hours trying to save a little by trying various sites, times, airlines, etc. The more complex the trip, the more time you'll spend...and the more you'll wonder if you're getting it right!

Should I use a travel agent?

We'll also help you determine if travel agents are the right choice for you. Travel agents may add particular touches to your trip thanks to their insider information, personal connections, and experience. Working with a travel agent may be the best choice for your next trip.

How do travel agents find cheap travel deals?

With a few keystrokes, you can find cheap travel deals on the web. But travel agents can do that and more. Often, travel agents receive deals directly from hotels and tour operators that you may not have access to. They also have contacts with resorts and hotels, so they can bargain for better deals.

How do travel agents make money?

Much of their money comes from commissions the hotels and wholesalers pay them. Before you decide to book with a travel agent, inquire whether or not they charge fees. Also, if you've booked a trip with a travel agent and for whatever reason need to cancel, they might be able to help get the refund more directly. Vacation more, spend less.
