What is a spot weld?

This method of spot weld fabrication is generally known as the automated method. The spot weld created has an indented surface caused by the pressure applied through the electrodes. A circumferential notch is also created when a spot weld forms between the two metal sheets. 1 4.1. Schematic of spot welding (HAZ is the heat affected zone).

What is spaced spot welding?

Spaced spot welding is realized by placing several spot welding at a certain overlap in order to achieve a seam weld. The length of the seam is scalable, but the heat input is very high because for each spot all process phases of spot welding have to be passed through. This may lead to distortion or thermal damage of the parts.
